"It's all about the light...lovely natural light. I like the way it defines shapes and spaces. When I do add light, I hope no one can tell."

Anne Gummerson

Anne Gummerson has been doing architectural photography in Baltimore and the Mid Atlantic area for about 30 years. Baltimore based, she shoots for architects, builders, interior designers, and other architecture related clients. Her work has been published in regional publications, including Chesapeake Home, Style, Baltimore Magazine, Urbanite and Washington Spaces, and has been occasionally featured in Elle Décor, House Beautiful, Home, Avalon, Veranda and others national venues. She studied French and Fine Arts at Goucher College, then got her MFA in photography from the Maryland Institute College of Art. After living in Scotland and Miami for a few years she returned to Baltimore in 1979 and started her own business. Through the years enjoyed working first in large and medium film format, and now with hi-res digital cameras. Learning Photoshop and to edit photos is an ongoing process. It is an ever-changing world.
